YOUTH IN
TRANSITIONNEETs' progression towards
Vocational Maturity

Individual progression

The term "NEET" refers to young people who are neither in education, nor employment or training. They typically struggle with a complexity of problems such as personal and/or social difficulties, psychological diagnoses, abuse, drugs, crime or lack of basic educational skills. Their difficulties typically occur in combination with each other. The pathways of the NEETs are highly individual.

Vocational maturity reflects the competencies and potentials that are necessary for starting in and retaining a job or an internship. This can also be true for the beginning of a vocational program and during its educational processes.

NEETs, too, have competences, dreams and potentials for achieving vocational maturity and thus, becoming self-supportive at long sight.
